Custom maps shattered colony

The only thing that's shattered is my immersion. The game worked as well as the so-called Endless mode. Then he started saying I was saying the negative numbers of survivors, so I couldn't tell him what happened to my actual numbers. About 5 warehouses into the infinite map, suddenly everything accelerated up to crazy speeds without any obvious reason. It's a programming error or ui error (as I have some sort of 3x speed control that I don't unknowingly switch to) but either way, I'm not sure if it's a complete deal breaker. Update: Also, zombies only appear randomly in the middle of unintended green spaces. You know what? From now on, every time I find a bug, I'm going to fall another half-star. That's ridiculous. Page 2 Took refuge in an abandoned house during a zombie outbreak. Are you going to survive? Prove yourself as the gladiator champion of Apocalyx: A new turn-based arena RPG! Use shotguns to fight your way to safety are you ready to explore the medal world? Shoot him, shoot him, shoot him... God, why are you missing? Aren't you a sniper? ... What do you mean, you're a pizza delivery man? Shattered Colony: In Survivors, this is the best defense you'll ever get. In fact, it's the only form of protection you have against the zombie apocalypse: a group of mismatched, anonymous survivors who have probably never kept a gun in their lives. Addictive, intense and unforgiving, Jonathan Duerig this tower defense game doesn't really fit the normal definitions of the genre. First, you'll only ever get to build four things in this zombie invasion Flash title: barricades, sniper towers, supply warehouses and workshops. You need to carefully consider placing everything; Supplies and ammunition need to be delivered on foot, so place a sniper too far from the base and you may be overwhelmed before coming with the help of a runner. You will also need to place workshops at the entrances to buildings to clean the materials they may have. Icons at the top of the screen display all survivors, boards, and bullets, and creating something (done by clicking the appropriate icon at the bottom left) requires a certain amount of each resource. Technically speaking, each of these structures can be upgraded. You can put more people in workshops to go faster, you can add barricaded boards to make them stronger and increase the range and ammunition each sniper tower holds. And that's pretty much it; You won't find anything else to work with. While other games may throw you a variety of mutant zombies, Shattered Colony has a variety of just slow, shambling and stupid. Hidden inside abandoned buildings and scattered all over the city, zombies won't approach you unless you engage in construction or fire too close to them in the vicinity of the near. It's all about waiting as long as possible and learning how to make the most of your network of survivors. In some strange way, spartan features are really what make the game shine. The Shattered Colony doesn't want you to create the world's most impenetrable defense maze. He wants you to survive. Everything in the Shattered Colony is limited. (Except for the game, given the presence of a map editor.) It's vital to make every decision. Do you spend those bullets collecting lonely zombies, or do you expect them to come in a pack with everyone? Are you putting everything in a sniper tower or risk building two more? Every choice you make is likely to come back to haunt you. In a strangely realistic and visceral top-down, cartoon-like way, you finally have a better feeling when you're alive to the end. Of course, when zombies finally break down your barricades, there's nothing more depressing than to realize you have a bullet.
